A NEW DEPARTURE!
BEST PLOW IN THE WORLD!

THE SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.
of Syracuse, N. Y.
Are now putting on the market a Plow that is as much superior to any Plow heretofore made as the Plows of the past few years have been superior to those made half a century ago.
It combines all the excellencies of any Plow in use.
It obviates all the objections made to any other Plow.
In addition it embraces several new features of the greatest value, for which we have obtained exclusive Patents.
Its Beam, Clevis, Jointer Standard and Wheel Standard will be STEEL, and its mold board will be a composition of Steel and Iron chilled under a process for which we have also obtained an exclusive Patent. It will be called
THE SYRACUSE
CHILLED STEEL PLOW
Its weight will be eighteen pounds less than our present styles.
A first-class Steel Plow, made in the ordinary way, full rigged, retails for twenty-two dollars. Inferior Steel Plows retail from sixteen to nineteen dollars.
The price of our new Plow will be but Seventeen Dollars, and it will be the cheapest Agricultural implement ever sold.
Its mold board will outwear three of the very best kinds of the ordinary steel mold boards.
It will scour in soils where all steel plows and all other plows have hitherto proved a failure.
With this Plow will be introduced a corrugated Plow Point and Jointer Point, on which we have also obtained a Patent, and which is also a great improvement, both as regards strength and wear.
The Jointer can be shifted so as to take more or less land, and also more or less pitch, and it can always be kept on a line with the Plow.
The wheel will run under the beam or one side of it as desired, and always kept in line.
The beam is adjustable for Spring or Fall Plowing, and also for two or three horses.
The handles can be adjusted to accommodate a man or boy, on the same Plow.
It is a perfect Plow.
Wooden beams are going out of use because they shrink, swell and warp, and never run two seasons alike.
Iron beams are too heavy.
Malleable beams become demoralized and bend, which is much worse than to break.
A steel beam is the necessity of the day. It is three times as strong and very much lighter than any other style.
When we say a Mold board is chilled, the farmers know it is so.
We do not palm off on them a composition of various metals and call it chilled metal.
We want agents for this new Plow in every town in this State.
We can give but a very small discount to them, but we will pay the Railroad Freight.
We propose to place this Plow in the hands of Farmers as near the cost of manufacture as possible.
It will be the best Agricultural Implement ever sold.
It shall also be the cheapest.
Persons therefore who are not willing to act as agents on the principle that "a nimble sixpence is better than a slow shilling," need not apply for an agency.
No Plows on commission. All sales absolute.
☞ This is the only Steel Chilled Plow in the World.
Steel costs several times more than Iron.
But this Plow, full rigged, by giving small discounts, can be sold for Seventeen Dollars. Compare this price with that of any Iron Plow ever made.
It is cheaper than any other Plow now made would be at five dollars and a half.
Where there are no agents we will, on receipt of Seventeen Dollars, send a Plow to any Railroad station in the State and pay the freight. Address,
SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.

THE EBB OF LOVE.

A love that wanes is an ebbing tide,
Which slowly, inch by inch and scarce perceived,
With many a wave that makes it seem to rise,
Falls from the shore. No sudden tension turns
The long accustomed loyalty to hate,
But years bring weariness for sweet contents
And fondness, daily sustenance of love,
Which use should make a tribute easier paid
First grudged, and then withholden, starves the heart,
And though compassion, or remorse thoughts
Of happy days departed, bring again
The ancient tenderness in seeming flood,
Not less it ebbs and ebbs till all is bare,
Oh, happy shore, the flowing tide shall brim
Thy empty pools and spread dull, tangled weeds
In streamers many-colored as the light
Which flash in Northern heavens, and revive
The fainting blossoms of the river's edge; but thou,
Oh, heart, whence love hath ebbed, art ever bare!

—The Spectator.

THE LOVERS.

I saw them last night leaning over the gate—
Striped pants and banged hair side by side—
You might know by the little round cap on his pate
That he would a bicycle ride;
And you might have known, too, by the gum in her cheek,
And her fly-away-hat, and the red
Little head underneath, that her mind she could speak
In case there was aught to be said.

Well, there she still stood, with her mouth full of gum
And a yummy-yum look in her eyes,
With a tongue that went on like a planing mill's hum
Or a phonograph in for a prize;
But I thought, as I heard them exchanging their vows,
And indulging in love's happy dream,
I would sooner hire out to keep flies off the cows
Than provide that young girl with ice cream.

Select Story.

THE TRIALS OF A SCHOOL MISTRESS

When, "the inahbitants in, and legal voters of," school district number one of the town of Westeastle, in the state of Massachusetts, chose Deacon Samuel Carter and Ross Wallace directors they rather congratulated themselves on having made the best possible choice, for all parties had been suited. Deacon Carter was an old, and Mr. Wallace a young man. The venerable Deacon was a married man, who rejoiced in the large family of sons and daughters that gathered around his table. Mr. Wallace was unmarried, and, to tell the truth, rather tyranized over a somewhat vixenish housekeeper. He was, however, something more than bashful, he was actually afraid of the girls and never went into society, and, it was said, always left the church before the benediction, so as to get rid of passing through the ordeal of having to bow perhaps even to speak, to a score of what he termed "giggling girls."

The principle duty of a school director is to select the teacher, and Mr. Wallace anticipated little trouble on that score, as Deacon Carter had been one of the directors for many years, and was a man always willing to take the responsibility.

"Ross," observed the deacon to his young associate in offical honors, as they met in the store one morning. I'll call around this evening and see you about the district. That is unless you would rather come over to my house and spend a social hour. Mrs. Carter and the girls would make you welcome I've no doubt,' and the deacon smiled baldly, as fathers of good-looking daughters are apt to smile on a well-to-do and moral young man desirable in every way as a son-in-law.

'Oh, call over and see me,' said Wallace. 'It would be a great deal more convenient for me if you would.'

'All right,' replied the deacon 'only you must be a little more neighborly than you have been.' he added, with another benevolent smile, and the two parted, the deacon to return home to hasten and superintend the preparations that were being made for a visit of at least four weeks that he was about to make to a brother who resided in 'Central New York, and the unsuspecting Ross to return home to eat a "picked up" dinner and to listen to the complaints of his housekeeper.

'Mr. Wallace have you got my starch?' demanded the housekeeper, a spinster of 50 winters; there had evidently been no summers in her life.

'Miss Hart, I must—I—that is,' stammered Ross.

'That is, you've forgotten it ag'in,' snapped the spinster.

'I'm afraid I have ma'am,' replied Ross dolefully.

'Which the same being the case, you won't get your shirt front done up for Sunday as I can see,' said the housekeeper, with a look of ill-concealed triumph.

Ross winced, for like many other bashfull men, he was particular in regard to his personal appearence and the meal proceeded in silence till the spinster broke out afresh.

'Mr. Wallace, I calculate that it wouldn't be convenient to let me have Len an hour or two to-morrow, would it?'

'Len' was Mr. Wallace's right hand man in farming operations, and he carried on farming on quite an extensive scale.

'No-o, that is, not very—'

'Then I calculate you'll have to drive down to the depot and take up my nieces yourself. They'll come up on the 10 o'clock train in the forenoon, and leave at 8 o'clock in the evening,' said the housekeeper.

'Drive down yourself,' suggested Mr. Wallace, 'the drive will do you good.'

'Ross Wallace,' said the spinster in a severe tone "I do believe that you'd be glad to have me killed. Me drive one of them get-up-and-get horses of your'n, as Len calls 'em, though I don't know what he means by the slang.'

'I'll let Len go, I guess,' observed Mr. Wallace, as he rose from his seat.

'That woman will be the death of me yet,' said the farmer to himself as he made his way to the back lot where his men were at work. 'Well, I may as well go down to Boston to-morrow as to go next week for the matter of that, I suppose.'

Me an' the girls will have the day to ourselves,' chuckled the ancient, as her employer left the house, and she herd the door 'bang' after him. I'll bet a dollar that he'll be off for somewhere bright and early to-morrow morning.'

Evening came and with it came also the deacon.

'Ross,' observed the pillar of the church 'you'l have to attend to the getting of the teacher.'

'What did you say, deacon?' inquired the horrified Ross.

'My brother John is sick, pretty low, in fact, an' as I haven't seen him for now goin' on twenty years I thought it my duty to make him a visit. John ain't got no near connection but me, an' maybe he'll come back an' stay with me till he's called; that's what he hinted at in his letter, an' he's my brother an' is well off an' so I'm going to Central New York to see him,' replied the deacon.

'How long will you be gone?' asked Ross with a last gleam of hope.

'Well, John thought him a'd me might get his affairs righted in about a month.'

'When must school commence deacon?'

'The district voted to have it begin a week from next Monday, Ross.'

'When do you go?' anxiously inquired Wallace.

'To-morrow,' calmly replied the deacon. 'The mistress'll board at Mr. Frey's—he gets too much for it; three dollars a week is a big price as it stands to reason she won't eat much, bein' a woman—an' all you've got to do is to get the right kind of a girl,' he added.

Wallace groaned.

'Has any one applied?' he asked.

'Well not exactly applied,' said the deacon, cautiously. 'There's the Brown girl, Julia, she told her ma'am to tell me that she didn't know but what she might take the school if she didn't take some other, and Mary Liscomb called before the meetin' was held to say that she might teach this summer, and again she might not.'

'What shall I do?' said Ross despondingly.

'Well, you'd better harness up an' ride around for a day or two an' see if you can't pick up a good passable kind of a girl that wants to teach,' replied the deacon as he rose to go.

Never in the whole course of his life had Ross Wallace been in such a fix. The idea of being put in such a position almost drove him mad. He, Ross Wallace, who had never even called upon one of the young ladies even of his immediate neighborhood, now asked to ride around and hunt up a 'passable kind of a girl,' who might want to teach.' The thought was maddening.

Ross went to Boston the next day.

The day after he was uncommonly busy on the farm and found no time to attend to the hunting up of the required 'passable kind of a girl' so much needed by School District No. 1, of the town of Westeastle. The evening found him in his room reading 'Hallam's middle Ages' when the housekeeper knocked at his door and made the—to him—fearful announcement—

'A young lady's in the sitting room waiting to see you, Mr. Wallace.'

'Angels and ministers of grace defend us!' exclaimed Ross. 'I wonder if she's the Brown girl, or the Mary Liscomb, that the deacon told me about?'

Plainly there was nothing to do but go down and meet his unwelcome visitor.

'If she's anyway fit to teach the school I'll engage her,' thought Ross as he entered the sitting room.

His visitor was not so imposing a one after all. It was not the 'Brown girl,' and it was not Mary Liscomb; that much he decided on at the first glance. A graceful little lady, small and slender, with a sweet face and framed in masses of curls, and shining hair that recalled to the mind of the school official a little curl that lay up stairs among his papers. A curl cut from the head of the mother who died before his remembrance. The thought sent the moisture to his eyes, and the little lady in black had won her suit before it was proffered.

'This is Mr. Wallace, the school director, I presume,' she said, breaking the silence that was getting embarrassing to both.

Mr. Wallace bowed.

'I am Kit Freeman and I called to see about taking your school. I graduated at Vassar. I am out of work and my mother is dead, and I am all alone in the world.'

'Poor little girl,' thought Mr. Wallace as he noticed the tears gather in her eyes and caught the trembling at once of lip and voice, and if Miss Kit had lacked anything of having the place she sought that would have secured it. Old Deacon Carter might not have thought her a 'passable girl,' but Mr. Wallace did. Twenty-five will differ from sixty-five on such subjects.

A long—yes, actually long—conversation followed, and Miss Kit was not only engaged, but left the house feeling quite well acquainted with Mr. Wallace, and wondered how any one could call him 'odd,' saying to herself with just a little blush, 'I'm sure he's just splendid, and not odd at all; and I'm sure too that I shall have a splendid time teaching the school.'

Poor, self-deceived Miss Kit. Foolish, confident Miss Kit to expect a 'splendid time' as the mistress of a country school. Deacon Carter, the author, or almost any other old man, could have told her better, and yet to what purpose! Why not take pleasure in anticipation while there is so little pleasure in the reality? Surely there is no harm and some little good done.

CHAPTER II.

'There's a snarl of uncommonly bad children in this district,' observed the boarding mistress to Miss Kit. 'A snarl of 'em, 'an if anything one is worse than the other if possible. You must be firm, 'an let 'em know you're master,' she continued with a calm disregard of the sex of the party addressed.

'I think that I can manage them,' said Miss Kit.

At school she found that the task would be a hard one indeed. The scholars kept reasonably quiet while the teacher was taking their names and assigning classes, but the trouble commenced in earnest then. A set of boys attended who reported themselves as "too big to go to a woman's school," as the ringleader informed Miss Kit, and she quite agreed with him, and only wished that his parents would think so also. Miss Kit had no peace of her life whatever hope she might have in her death, which she declared to be near, as the children were bound to kill her.

A worse school could hardly be imagined. Miss Kit had led in repeating the Lord's Prayer, a part of the regular school exercise, for a few days with bowed head and closed eyes, but she found that the assuming of that reverent attitude was the signal for raining a shower of paper balls on her devoted head, and she concluded to 'watch as well as pray,' and led that portion of the school exercises with eyes wide open and head erect.

The children acted worse and worse as the days went by, and litt'. Miss Kit, who tried the best she could to keep order, was sorely perplexed. As Mrs. Deacon Carter expressed it, 'Them critters at the school house act as if possessed with witches,' and Miss Kit felt that she would gladly have exchanged them for the whole company of the servants of the 'prince of the power of the air,' that of old time so sorely afflicted the ancient town of Salem.

Such a state of affairs could not of course long escape the notice of the only remaining school director, and Mr. Wallace had frequent interviews with the perplexed teacher and he found himself thinking of her in a way that he had never even dreamed of thinking of a woman, yet I supect he would have been astonished if any one had suggested that he was in love. He was interested in Miss Kit—and in the school—because it was his official duty to be. Only that and nothing more. It was his duty to attend to the school and he discharged that duty in the most painstaking manner.

By the advice of the director Miss Kit took a firmer stand and punished one or two pupils, but a rebellion is much more easily suppressed in the commencement than after some time has passed, as all history teaches and Miss Kit found.

The school had been running two weeks.

Deacon Carter was expected home Monday night, and the people predicted that he would at once bring order (which is Heaven's first law) out of what pretty closely resembled chaos as far as law was concerned, by the discharge of the teacher, and the hiring of either the Brown girl or Mary Liscomb who, it was said, would thrash the rebels into instant and unconditional submission.

Saturday evening Mr. Wallace called at the school house after the school had been dismissed. It had rained more or less all day and the road was rather muddy.

'If Miss Kit is here I'll take her home,' Mr. Wallace had thought as he drew up his horse in front of the temple of knowledge.

Miss Kit was there.

And Miss Kit was in tears.

And naturally Mr. Wallace inquired what fresh trouble had occurred, inquired he it said, with a sad heart, for he could not disguise from himself that Miss Kit must go.

'They are getting worse and worse,' sobbed Miss Kit, 'and to day, when I put Tom Dyer under the desk to punish him he cut my rubber to bits, and the little teacher held up the fragments of what had once been a dainty little rubber. 'And now, she added 'they tell me that cross old Deacon Carter will make me leave, and where can I get another engagement?'

'I'll tell you,' said Ross Wallace.

She looked up and read the love story that his eyes told, and her own black eyes fell again.

'Take me for a life-long pupil. Be my wife,' he said.

Miss Kit looked up shyly and whispered something that probably was not a refusal, as Mr. Wallace gave—and received—his first love kiss.

* * * * * *

Deacon Carter returned home on Monday, 'and the Brown girl' was at once installed as mistress of the district school and succeeded in keeping the term out in peace, and Miss Kit was installed as Mistress of the home of Mr. Ross Wallace some few weeks later.—Portland New Era.

How the Sunday Stone was Made.

In an Oxford museum may been seen a strange stone. It is composed of carbonate of lime, and was taken from a pipe which carries off drain water in a colliery. The stone consists of alternate layers of black and white, so that it has a striped appearance. This was caused in the following way: When the miners were at work, the water which ran through the pipe contained a good deal of coal dust, it so left a black deposit in the pipe. But, when no work was going on—as, for instance, in the night—the water was clean, and so a white layer was formed. In time these deposits quite filled the pipes, and it was therefore taken up. Then it was found that the black and white formed quite a calendar. Small streaks, alternately black and white, showed a week, and then a clean white streak of twice the usual size. This was Sabbath, during which there was no work for twenty four hours. But in the middle of one week there came a white streak of twice the usual size. On inquiry it was found that on that day a large fair had been held in the neighborhood, and no work had been done at the colliery. Every change in the ordinary course had left its mark on this strange stone, to which has been given the title of "The Sunday Stone."

Executions in China.

In treatment of their State criminals the Chinese move with characteristic tardiness, and a doomed man has many months to live before him. Routine fixes the month of December as the most convenient seasons of public executions. The prisons in all the different provinces are all well stored with prisoners under sentence of death, but when the end of the year approaches the Minister of Justice revises the list of these convicts, striking out any names he desires to spare. The paper is then submitted to the Emperor, who in turn reviews the list and exercises the Imperial clemency. When December comes round the fatal list goes the circut of all the Provinces. The Governor assembles his prisoners and holds a solemn review at the place of execution. The time has now come for formality and action. The paper is brought and duly sealed. The seal is broken and the list read out. Those whose names are crossed out learn their good luck for the first time; the others, without needless ceremony or delay, are then and there executed. To a European the lengthened suspense would be intolerable, but the Chinese are phlegmatic, and as the majority of the convicts get pardoned they are as hopeful to the end as New York murderers.

Guilty of Wrong.

Some people have a fashion of confusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent medicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong. There are some advertised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of—Hop Bitters. The writer has had occasion to use the Bitters in just such a climate as we have most of the year in Bay city, and has always found them to be first-class and reliable doing all that is claimed for them.—Tribune.

Only a Brother-in-law.

THE KING OF GREECE AND SARA BERNHARDT.

Mlle. Sara Bernhardt, as described by M. Sarcey in the Dix-Neuvieme Siecle, has not the most exquisite manners. He says that the Prince of Wales presented the King of Greece to her behind the scenes the other evening, simply calling him 'My brother-in-law.' 'Mlle Bernhardt,' says M. Sarcey, 'bowed her acknowledgements, and while the Prince went to congratulate the other actors she remained tete-a-tete with the King, but she was not aware that she was talking to a king. She called him 'Monsieur' all the time, and talked right and left in her usual cavalier style. But time pressed and she had to return to the dressing room. 'Well,' said her colleagues to her, 'what do you think of the King of Greece?' 'What do you mean—what King of Greece?' she inquired.

'The king of Greece,' with whom you have just been talking, was the reply. 'What! it was the king of Greece! it was a king!' and away she ran down stairs to see the prince of Wales. 'Ah! prince,' she exclaimed 'it was treachery on your part not to tell me it was the king of Greece. 'But I told you he was my brother-in-law,' answered his royal highness; to which the actress rejoined: 'Your brother-in-law! But how was I to know? He might have been a tallow merchant!' And away she darted to the dressing room, leaving the prince nonplussed. You may think the English have been shocked in this. Nothing of the kind; they forgive everything in this spoiled child.'

Where the Democrats Must Work.

To elect General Hancock it may be necessary for the Democrats to carry Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut. It is highly probable that they cannot prevail without the aid of Pennsylvania and Connecticut, both of which are confidentially claimed by the Republicans. But unanticipated losses elsewhere may make the votes of all of these four States indispensable to the Democratic candidate. At all events the opponents of Garfield, looking to the future, should put forth their best exertions for victory in these states, even if they are not essential to success. The battle ground which we have designated will be hotly contested by the two great parties. It teems with millions of intelligent and thrifty people. It contains the busy hives of the leading industries of the country. It abounds in newspapers of every variety, and schools of all grades. There is no portion of the Union that will better reward cultivation from the platform and through the press. There are no other communities upon which the claptrap, falsehood, superficial arguments and hypocritical pretensions would so surely be wasted. Here, then, is a field for plenty of hard work in the canvass of this summer and fall. A careful look over the ground will convince the Democrats that

SUPREME JUDGE,
GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson county.

AUDITOR GENERAL,
ROBERT P. DECHERT, Philadelphia.

Delegate election will be held on Saturday, August 7th between the hours of three and seven o'clock in the afternoon. Some cards have been printed by mistake announcing the 14th as the day. Democrats will please take notice that the 7th is the correct time.

The Republican is exercised about our "manhood," and yet this same paper had the audacity to print at the head of its editorial column in capital letters, a garbled extract from a letter of Judge Black, when the very next sentence of that letter entirely changed the aspect of Black's opinion of Garfield. Even after we had exposed this dishonest attempt to influence public opinion in favor of their candidates, they had the cheek to keep this extract in another week. That's Republican manhood.

Delegate election on Saturday, August 7th from three to seven p. m. Keep it in mind.

It is rumored that a Greenback campaign paper is to be started in this town. If true it is only a republican scheme to injure the Democratic party. The Greenback issue in this county is dead. Reports from all sections are to the effect that those democrats who voted with that party have returned to their first love an I will vote the Democratic ticket this fall. A paper to lead Democrats astray again is the child of republican schemers, and will be backed by republican money. Democrats who support such an organ are merely making themselves the dupes of republican leaders.

"During the campaign which will be characterized by much excitement our readers may rely upon all questions of fact that we publish editorially."

The above appears in this week's Republican. Can it be possible that our contemporary contemplates closing up its office? Or are they going to diminish the size of their sheet during the campaign? It is one of these things, for the amount of truth that they will tell from now until the election can be printed in a very small space.

With Kemble and his crowd of corrupt solicitors out of the penitentiary; with Mouatt the ballot box stuffer let off by a disagreeing jury, 11 to 1; with a British free trade Cobden Club, and Hayes' army and navy, the opposition expect to intimidate the democracy this fall.

Democrats! there is a corrupt league worthy of your indignation. Let every vote be cast against it, see that every man is assessed, registered and taxes paid, see to it now—examine the lists at once. Remember, General Hancock says:

"The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved."

DEMOCRATIC HARMONY.

Republicans have been highly elated over the division of the Democracy in Philadelphia, New York and Virginia. All differences in the two former have been adjusted, and they will support Hancock and English with all their strength. In Virginia two sets of Democratic electors were nominated, one by the Readjusters and the other by the Funder ring.

A number of prominent Democrats and Readjusters have since taken hold of the matter, and by their energy and influence have inaugurated a movement, which from the number and prominence of those of both sides who have flocked to the standard, must necessarily result in the much desired compromise.

Our republican friends will have to look around for something else to smile at.

Delegate election on Saturday August 7th from three to seven p. m. Keep it in mind.

"If you will sit down and write the best thing that can be put in language about General Hancock as an officer and a gentleman I will sign it without hesitation."—General William T. Sherman.

Delegate election on Saturday August 7th from three to seven p. m. Keep it in mind.

Mr. J. M. C. Ranck informs us that his residence has been at Lightstreet since August 1877, that he has paid poll tax and voted there since that time.

It is of no moment where his legal residence is, if his interests and business are outside the county. Upon the envelope in which he sends us a letter is printed the following: "J. M. C. Ranck, attorney at Law, and General Collection Agent, 402 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton Pa." The Scranton Republican speaks of him as "our towns man."

We have no objection to Mr. Ranck and would heartily support him if nominated for Congress. But as there are two other candidates for the office who have been identified with the party of this county for years it would seem but fair to instruct for one of them in preference to one who only spends his time here when a congressman is to be elected.

Hayes threatens that the army and navy will take a part in the elections this fall.

The constitution says, "The elections shall be free and equal: and no power civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the rights of suffrage."

General Hancock says," The true and proper use of the military power, besides defending the national honor against foreign nations, is to uphold the laws and civil government and to secure to every person residing among us the enjoyment of life, liberty and prosperity."

Who is the patriot, who sustains the constitution and the laws? Who should be entrusted with the conduct of affairs? Let the people answer undeterred by threats of the army and navy.

James A. Garfield the republican candidate for President, was a member of Congress in the times of the most disgraceful salary grab business, and was chairman of the Conference committee by which the bill to steal that money was passed. He says he was opposed to it in the first place as not being the right thing to do, but he was too weak in moral principle to resist the taking of the money. And this showing is his own certificate of character.

Mr. Garfield drew out his share of the money and only returned it when the most callous of the salary-grabbers were forced to do the same by an outburst of popular indignation which could not be withstood. He held on to it, in fact, until the Republican committee of one of the counties in his district (Trumbull) unanimously passed a resolution censuring him for voting for the bill increasing Congressional salaries, and demanding his resignation. A week later—April 2, 1877—he turned his ill-gotten gains—$4,538—back into the United States Treasury.

The Honorable William D. Kelly has been endorsing Garfield's tariff views, but knowing him to be a free trader. The reason for the milk in that cocoanut is, that Kelly and Garfield both had their hands in Oakes Ames' pocket-book. On the 15th of February 1873, the committee made its report, and on February 19, with the report and all the evidence before it, the New York Times thus speaks of its present candidate for the Presidency:

"Of the members referred to Messrs Kelly and Garfield present a most distressing figure. Their participation in the Credit Mobilier is complicated by the most unfortunate contradictions of testimony which the committee do not undertake to unravel. The only possible comment on their cases is that had they taken a perfectly upright course in the matter and refused to have anything to do with the stock no occasion for contradiction could have arisen."

Mr. Kelly "presents a most distressing figure" in trying to impose his late partner in the Credit Mobilier affair, on the people of Pennsylvania, as a tariff man. James and William, par nobile fratrum. Both Oakes Ames.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. July 28th, 1880.

POLITICAL ISSUES—GEN. GARFIELD'S PART IN THE GREAT FRAUD—MORAL OBLIQUITY OF MEN IN HIGH OFFICIAL POSITION WHO ATTEMPTED TO ASSASSINATE THE REPUB. LIC.

Said a gentleman to me yesterday, whose name is distinguished in the annals of his country's recent Legislative history, "It is absurb for so-called independents to insist that the coming election will be merely a contest between candidates and parties, and that there are no great issues before the people." Issues were never more momentous or more sharply defined. First and foremost among them is the overtowering issue raised by the Electoral Commission. In it is involved nothing less than the right of the people to choose through constitutional methods their highest executive officer. It really involves their right to vote, for the ballot will become an empty mockery if the great crime by which Mr. Hayes was installed shall go unrebuked, and freedom will have greater cause to shriuk than at the death of ten thousand Kosciuskos, if one of the visiting statesman and one of the electoral eight shall be elected to the high place now desecrated by an executive placed there by fraud.

Political philosophers are right in speaking of Republican Government as an experiment. True, it had subsisted in the United States until the election of Mr. Tilden. It has appeared fitfully and intermittently in France. Favored by peculiar geographical environment it has held its own in the fastness of the Swiss Alps. There are certain indications in modern times that point to Republicanism as the government of the remote future, but viewed in the light of the world's history, Republican government must be looked upon as a very novel experiment. Certain it is that it has been most fatally stunned for four years in the United States, and that the Republican party are so callously insensible to the crime and the calamity, that they are trying to reward one of the chief assassins with the Presidency. It is this callousness, this moral obliquity of men of high judicial and legislative places, where they ought to be chastened and purified with enthusiasm for this sublime but critical exploiting of popular government that makes patriots seriously solicitous for the fate of Republican institutions in the United States.

HILTON.

Wants to Know, you Know.

An ex-soldier writes the Cleveland Plaindealer to know if Arthur's conduct during the war in furnishing thirty regiments of brave men with the meanest rotten shoddy was either patriotic or replete with republican doctrines, and was Arthur's conduct as a government official in keeping with republican honesty at the time Mr. Hayes and Sherman bounced him in order that his office might be honestly administered,

Mr. Justice Swayne's statement concerning the De Golyer business is much plainer than that of Mr. Doolittle. He says:

"So far as I am concerned, there is an entire misstatement. I never wrote a word of what is attributed to me. I never knew anything of the facts of the matter charged against General Garfield, and it was certainly never in any shape before the Supreme Court. I had, therefore, neither occasion nor opportunity to express any judicial opinion on the subject. It is not stated where any case in which General Garfield was concerned is reported. My confident impression is that I never heard of such a case before. General Garfield is a personal friend of mine, and I have the highest confidence in his integrity."

This is clear and correct. Justice Swayne's opinion, that a contract for purely professional services is valid, but that such services are separated by a broad line from personal solicitation and from official influence, was given in the case of Burke versus Child, with which Mr Garfield had nothing to do. When Chittender, who was a Washington lobbyist, sued McClellan and DeGolyer, in Chicago, for his share of the profits of the paving contracts, the $5,000 he had paid to Mr. Garfield, then chairman of the appropriations committee, formed an element in his claim. The defendant's counsel demurred to the recognition of this transaction, on the ground that it was an agreement for the sale of official influence, and therefore void, as against public policy and good morals, citing Justic Swayne's opinion in Burke versus Child in support of this view. It was in this trial that the $5,000 fee first came to light. It attracted a great deal of attention at the time and much was said in the papers about the judicial condemnation of Mr. Garfield's relation with the paving contractors. The details had, however, passed out of mind, so that when the quotation on the subject was lately printed and attributed to Justice Swayne, it was widely accepted as correct. The truth appears to be that it was Judge Farwell, of the Circuit Court of Cook county, Illinois, who passed judgment on this fee, and it never came before the Supreme Court. This appears to be the whole truth of the matter, which has been badly muddled during the past few days. The facts concerning Mr. Garfield, it will be observed, are not questioned. The mistake has been in putting the case in the wrong court.—Phila. Times

THE DEATH DAMP.

THREE OF SHENANDOAH'S MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS LOST.

Shenandoah, July 27.—A terrible disaster occurred here this morning and has thrown the community into a gloomy excitement. For the past few days the presence of that deadly gas, black damp, in very considerable quantities has been noticed in the working parts of the Thomas coal company's Keely Run colliery, near this place. Yesterday it became so strong that some of the men had to stop working before quitting time. Last night Jonathan Wasley, Esq., the superintendent, and Frank Willman, the inside boss had a consultation with respect to the matter, and it is supposed called upon John Reece, the Superintendent of the coal and iron company for the Shenandoah district for his advice. About 11 o'clock last night, last time, they made up their minds, it is supposed, to go into the mines and find out, if possible, where the gas was coming from as its presence in such unusual quantities was an enigma. Mr. Wasley told his wife that he would be back in an hour, and when Mr. Reece went home to put on his gum boots he made a similar remark to his wife and told her to look for him about midnight. About one o'clock Mrs. Reece became alarmed at the continued absence of her husband and sent her son, a boy of fifteen years, and a young man, her brother-in-law, up to the Keely Run colliery to search for her husband. They saw the fireman who said that about 11 o'clock Willman had been at the engine house and got a lamp, and he and two other men had gone down into the mine by an opening in an old breast that had fallen in, which is located about two hundred yards from the slope. When morning came the families of Mr. Wasley and Mr. Reece became alarmed, and a general search was instituted. Inspector Gay, Thos. Roberts and John Ormsby attempted to make search of the east gangway, near which the men were supposed to be. They immediately detected the presence of the deadly gas in large quantities, and having pushed forward a certain distance, Mr. Gay said: 'Now let us turn and run.' The warning was not given a moment too soon. In attempting to get out of the gangway Mr. Gay fell, overcome with the deadly damp, and was carried out insensible. He was taken to his home where he is now lying, but he will recover.

A party consisting of Col. David Brown, George Johns, of Mahany Plane, John Beddoe, Jacob Shuey and Inspector Sampson Parton determined to make an attempt by the old breast by which the missing men had entered. They did so and found the air much better, and succeeded in getting in far enough to find the bodies. Three men were found at 12:30 o'clock lying in the gangway about 75 feet east of the breast where they entered the mines. They were overcome by the damp evidently after entering. The body of Mr. Wasley was first found. Then that of John Reece a little further in, that of Willman, all face downwards as they had fallen. When it was announced on the bank that the bodies had been found the excitement was intense, and a rumor that they were alive rapidly gained circulation. It reached the homes of the unfortunate men, raising the hopes of the families which were soon dissipated as the lifeless forms of their dear ones were carried in. The gas is what is known as white damp. Inspector Gay was on the bank at the scene of the disaster long before he had fully recovered from the effects of the gas. Twenty-eight men were overcome by gas during the work of the morning.

The funerals of the three unfortunate men will take place at 11 o'clock on Thursday morning next. They were all members of the Masonic lodge here at Shenandoah.

As the republicans don't seem to have found out yet that Chester A. Arthur late collector of customs has been nominated as their candidate for Vice-President, we hereby announce to them the fact, and likewise publish with the announcement the following testimonial of Character.

Hayes Message to the Senate, January 21 1879.

With my information of the facts in the case, and with a deep sense of the responsible obligation imposed upon me by the constitution, "to take care that the laws be fully executed," I regard it as my plain duty to suspend the officers in question, and to make the nominations now before the Senate in order that this important office may be honestly and efficiently administered.

Mr. Garfield is not solitary in the enjoyment of an honorary membership of the Cobden Club. His friend Mr. Murat Halstead appears in the list of those elected during the past year, along with a dozen other Americans.

THE LONG POND.

One the top of the North Mountain about three thousand feet above the level of the sea, is a beautiful body of water of considerable expanse commonly known as the Long Pond. It is indeed a lovely sheet of water and its formation must have been one of the indulgent freaks of nature, when she exerted herself to promote the happiness and comfort of the votary of pleasure in his search for quiet and healthful repose. In point of picturesque scenery and healthfulness of location the place is not easily surpassed. And, whatever the hand of nature may have omitted in making the site all that could be desired, has been supplied by and ingenuity of the human will. Ample clearings have been made; spacious and commodious buildings erected; walks and pavements constructed; beautiful lawns transplanted with useful and ornamental trees have been laid out; boat houses have been erected on the banks of the lake and supplied with a large number of boats—sail and otherwise; and in fact all that can pertain to elegance of the place and the comfort of the sojourner has been accomplished. As a consequential recompense to the proprietor in return for the expense and pains incurred in making the place additionally attractive, it has of late grown in importance as a watering place and summer resort; and although the number of permanent boarders at present is small, we must remember that we are in advance of the season when such places are crowded to overflowing. Although the place is recognized as a summer resort, yet Long Pond hotel is to all intents and purposes a public house, where not only the permanent sojourner, but the weary traveler, and the business man as well as the holiday parties and casual parties of pleasure seekers are supposed by the law of custom to be admissible and welcome and entitled to all the privileges which the establishment affords, when they are willing to pay well for all the attentions shown them. With a knowledge of these facts a small party of six couples from Stillwater and vicinity repaired to the Long Pond, Saturday, July 24, for the purpose of enjoying the accommodations which are open and free to patrons of the place. We arrived safely at the Long Pond about eleven o'clock. After helping the fair ones of our party to alight we, in absence of hostler assistance, drove to the large stable, where with the help afforded us by the lone but courteous hostler—let it be said for him who ought to be manager instead of the present incumbent, we had nearly finished unhitching our horses, when there appeared among the crowd a tall man, flourishing his hands high above his head, and shouting at the top of his voice, "Get out of here every ——— ——— one of you." Upon immediate inquiry, we learned that he was Mr. Frank Ricketts, the gentlemanly proprietor of the Long Pond Hotel. We politely informed him that we purposed patronizing him, that we wished to have our horses fed and cared for, and ourselves provided with dinner, refreshments, and all the entertainments which the place afforded, but our rising disgust of the place and the man was only heightened by hearing him repeat his command, "Get out of here every ——— ——— one of you, and if you don't get out I can put you out." We concluded immediately to leave, not that we entertained any fear of the gentleman; oh no; but we did not think it healthy to remain longer. All the ideas which we may have entertained concerning the healthfulness of the Long Pond atmosphere vanished in one short moment; for we could not conceive how the air could be pure and wholesome, when a flood of such eloquent profanity was continually falling upon it. Suffice it to say that within ten minutes after our arrival, we were en route for the Mountain House, kept by Joseph Hecker; where we ordered our tired horses fed, and having taken of some refreshments ourselves, we started at two o'clock for Benton, at which place we arrived at four o'clock. We stopped at the Exchange Hotel and were most hospitably entertained by the genial and accommodating landlord, Mr. Hiram Hess, and his excellent lady, Mrs. Olive Hess. As a volume would not contain an expression of the disgust which we feel for the treatment received at the Long Pond, so a volume cannot contain the praises due our kind Benton host and hostess for the kind reception tendered us. A most bountiful supper was prepared for us, and it we did justice to it, there were ample reasons for it. The supper was of the first quality, and we had gone all the way to the Long Pond and back again to get it. So ended our Long Pond expedition, one ever to be remembered by all who were connected with it.

To my friends, especially my associates in that ever memorable journey, I would say: If you wish to indulge in any more pleasure trips, go anywhere except the Long Pond. Go to New Philadelphia if you wish; go anywhere along Fishingcreek; go to Benton. To be sure, you will not see the Long Pond, but you can behold purer water in the beautiful Fishingcreek, and the air is more invigorating anywhere along its course, for reasons cited above. But wherever you go, come back to Hess' for supper, for there you will be treated with respect and accommodated with the best.

The Coming State Agricultural Fair.

The arrangements for the twenty-seventh annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society, which is to be held at the Permanent Exhibition Building, from 6th to the 18th of September, and be followed by an international exhibition of sheep, wool, woollen products and machinery, from the 10th to the 25th of the same month, are daily being perfected, and by the dates named everything promises to be in readiness for a complete and satisfactory showing. Up to this time there has been one hundred and fifty personal applications at the office, northwest corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, for space for exhibits, and five hundred letters have been received asking for blank forms for application. The schedule of classifications comprise four general departments, viz.: live stock, farm and garden products and their manufactures, tools, implements and machinery, and home and social improvements, embracing thirty-six groups and ninety-seven sub-divisions or classes.

A liberal premium list of $40,000 has been arranged, or twice as much as that of the last year, and from present indications it is believed that the exhibits will not only be twice as large as last year, but better in character, quality and general appearance. Last year there were over a mile and a half of stalls, but this year this space is to be doubled, thus giving plenty of room to the live stock. Special arrangements are being and have been made for conveying exhibitors and stock to the fair at reduced rates, the railroad companies having signified their intentions of offering unusual facilities. It is estimated that 200,000 persons will visit the fair during its continuance, which is considered a moderate computation, in view of the efforts making for a fine display.

THE BALD HEAD'S FRIEND.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

CARBOLINE!

A Deodorized extract of Petroleum,

The Only Article that Will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

What the World has been Wanting for Centuries.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative, and while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and, like many other wonderful discoveries, it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in far-off Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a most finer head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The manes and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our chemists has overcome the difficulty, and by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing refined petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as daintily as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications, where the hair was thin and falling, gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid so searching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once, and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and, by some mysterious operation of nature, the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light-brown color to the hair which by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburgh Commercial of Oct. 23, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of thousands who are using it with the most gratifying and encouraging results:

W. H. BELL & Co., Fifth Avenue Pharmacy, says, "We have sold preparations for the hair for upward of twenty years, but have never had one to sell as well or give such universal satisfaction. We therefore recommend it with confidence to our friends and the general public."

Mr. GUSTAVUS F. HALL, of the Oates Opera Troupe, writes: "After six weeks' use I am convinced, as are also my comrades, that your 'Carboline' has and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had none for years."

C. H. SMITH, of the Jennie Hight Combination, writes: "After using your 'Carboline' three weeks I am convinced that bald heads can be 're-haired.' It's simply wonderful in my case."

B. F. ARTHUR, chemist, Holyoke, Mass., writes: "Your 'Carboline' has restored my hair after everything else had failed."

JOSEPH E. POND, attorney-at-law, No. Attleboro, Mass., writes: For more than 20 years a portion of my head has been as smooth and free from hair as a billiard ball, but some eight weeks ago I was induced to try your Carboline, and the effect has been simply wonderful. Where no hair has been seen for years there now appears a thick growth, and I am convinced that by continuing its use I shall have as good a head of hair as I ever had. It is growing now nearly as rapidly as hair does after it is cut.

CARBOLINE

Is now presented to the public without fear of contradiction as the best Restorative and Beautifier of the Hair the world has ever produced.

Camp meeting at Rupert is largely attended.

Delegate election on Saturday, August 7th from three to seven p. m. Keep it in mind.

The mornings and evenings have been delightfully cool for some days past.

William Krickbaum is improving in health. He has been quite poorly for several weeks.

C. G. Barkley, Esq., addressed the Hancock and English Club on Wednesday evening.

Capt. Brockway is making some decided improvements on his residence.

There were nearly two pages of guests registered at the Exchange Hotel last Saturday.

See advertisement of the Peoples' Drug Store in another column.

A large crowd attended the Rupert campmeeting on Sunday. The exercises will be continued until after next Sunday.

The Afton Cornet Band wishes to tender their thanks to the Bloomsburg and Berwick bands, also to the ladies of Afton and community for their assistance on Saturday at their festival.

Robert R. Little, Esq., appears to have no competition for the office of District Attorney. His re-election will be a deserved compliment to a faithful and energetic officer.

The personal attacks that are being made weekly, in several of our cotemporaries, are simply disgraceful. They please only the lowest class of readers who are always on the lookout for a fight. Better drop that kind of journalism, gentlemen.

Daniel L. Yeager, at one time a resident of Ashland, died in Franklin township, Columbia county, on Thursday, July 15th, 1880. Mr. Yeager came to Ashland in 1858 with our townsman Wm. H. Burchfield, with whom he worked until the breaking out of the war. After his return from the army he located permanently in Harrisburg where he resided until about two years ago, when continued bad health caused him to relinquish business. Last summer he visited Mr. Burchfield and at the time of his death was visiting his mother. He was in the 40th year of his age.—Ashland Advocate.

Dr. I. L. Labb left town on Monday to attend the Pennsylvania State Dental Convention held at Bellefonte on the 27th, 28th and 29th of this month.

TO THE PUBLIC.

I am now completing my long contemplated History of Danville. It will contain all that can be gathered authentically of its pioneers and its early days, but will be more especially devoted to the last quarter of a century. The various institutions—educational, moral and religious; its business enterprises, its prominent men, noted occurrences, and war record, will all be faithfully presented. In a word, its improvements, and its progress in the march of advancing civilization, cannot fail to interest every citizen of Danville. It will contain about four hundred pages, with a number of portraits of the past and present generation. It will be neatly bound in cloth and will be sold to subscribers only, at one dollar per copy, payable on delivery. Absent or former citizens and others desiring a copy of this work, will please address the author,

Property of Jacob Cole in Pine township to A. P Heller for $380.

Property of Jackson Walter on Welsh Hill to M. C. Woodward for $350.

Property of same in Scott town to Susan Walter for $301.

Property of same in Montour township to Mary Jane Walter for $90.

Same to same in Montour township for $85.

Geo. E Elwell will be at the Exchange Hotel in Benton on Thursday, August 5th, and will be pleased to receive the names of those who desire to subscribe for this paper. He also requests that all those who are indebted to Brockway & Elwell for subscription up to October 1st, 1879 will call and settle, and all who are ready to pay for the present year will have an opportunity of doing so. "KELLY THE BUM."

We notice in the Pittsburg Critic that an individual answering to the above cognomen was last week tried and convicted in one of the courts of that city of the crime of murder, and sentenced to eight years imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary. Can this be the same "Kelly the Bum" who figured years ago at Bloomsburg as principal witness in the Mollie Maguire trial, which ended in the conviction and hanging of Pat. Hester, McHugh and Tolly? If so, it is no surprise to those who heard his testimony on the occasion named, for his evidence was of such a character as to prove that he richly deserved hanging. But luck seems to follow the rogue, as for the taking of one more life he escapes with a term in the penitentiary instead of having his neck stretched. Should he live through his present term of imprisonment, or more likely be pardoned, he may yet be dumped through the trap, as most likely he will be imbruing his hands in human blood as soon as he is again loosened on society.—Danville Intelligencer.

OUR FIRE DEPARTMENT.

BLOOMSBURG, July 27th, 1880.

MESSRS. EDITORS COLUMBIAN: In a few weeks water will be let into the pipes and our town will be provided with an efficient fire protection. The three fire companies when properly regulated, will make as good a fire department as any town in the State can boast of. The water supply will be such that four streams can be thrown on a fire at one time. The two hose companies will therefore be sufficient for any emergency, as not more than two fire plugs can be attached to with the proposed supply of hose, owing to the distance they are placed apart. The town council have ordered eight hundred feet of new and good hose. This will not be more than enough to throw more than one stream in some portions of the town, and can easily be carried by the "Friendship" and "Winona" carriages. Now it has been proposed that the council purchase a hose carriage for the "Rescue Hook & Ladder." It seems to me this would be a useless expense. The town will have two hose carriages without any expense to the corporation while if they purchase a third the Hook & Ladder truck which was bought only a few years ago by contribution would be abandoned. A hook and ladder company is needed, three hose companies are not needed. If the council has any idea of purchasing a new hose carriage, I would suggest that they abandon the project and expend the money in additional hose instead.

A man with a slouch hat and silver gray moustache went into the store of a certain Hibernian cobbler recently and said that as this was camp meeting season he wanted his old shoes converted. "What," said the cobbler. "Why, new soles for them you know," was the reply. That old sword was immediately produced and the customer hastily departed.

What an old physician says: In a practice of more than thirty years, I have never found a curative equal to the great Mexican remedy, Herbaline Bitters. Having used but two bottles I am entirely relieved of a chronic affection of the stomach and bowels of seven years standing. I regard it as the best health restoring agent in the world. C. Englishmen formerly supposed that American running horses were very inferior to theirs but during the last two years Parole, Wallenstein and other fast ones that were sent from this country to England, have won hundreds of thousands of dollars, for such Americans as the Messrs. Lorillard, James Gordon Bennett, &c. The Englishmen have investigated the reasons for the great success of the American horses, and find that they are kept in such fine condition by the constant use of M. B. Roberts' Horse Powders. july 2 2m

BUCKHORN NEWS.

BUCKHORN, July 26, 1880.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

We are sorry to note that the scarlet fever is again in our midst. A child of John Workheiser's is lying in a critical condition with this dread disease.

Mr. William Fregeskes was severely hurt on last Saturday while working in Neal's slope, several cars of dirt having fallen upon him.

Capt. Isaac Leidy was in town on the 22nd. The captain is 82 years old and seems to be quite feeble, though his mind and conversational powers are still retained, and the listener was very much entertained by hearing him speak of drilling his company years ago on battalion day. The Captain is a genuine Democrat.

Prof Bastch and wife, of Shenandoah, were the guests of Jno. Hartman on the 23rd.

I.

We have much pleasure in recommending Thermaline to our readers, as an absolute cure for Malaria. The manufacturers' name alone is a guarantee of its merit. It sells at 25 cents per box. For particulars see Advt. july 30, '80-6mpow

We have received from the Thomas W. Price Co., 505 Minor street, Philadelphia, life-size portraits of Major General Winfield S. Hancock and Hon. W. H. English. They are perfect likenesses, finished in fine style on good heavy paper. They are far the best that we have seen yet. Persons desiring these portraits should address this company. The prices are very reasonable.

We are informed that William Shaffer has a turkey that has laid 96 eggs this season without intermission. She was still at it when last heard from, and has shown no disposition to brood. Such fowls are scarce.

Don't forget the Fair and Festival. Good music, nice refreshments, and lots of people will be found in Evans' Hall this Friday and Saturday evenings.

The Bone and Muscle producing Malt, the nerve-quieting Hop, the superb Malarial antidote Quinine, and other precious ingredients, combined without fermentation, are the ingredients of "Malt Bitters," prepared by the Malt Bitters Company.

Thomas Gorry of this town has been appointed agent for the sale of John W. Forney's "Life of General Hancock." He proposes to make an active canvass of the county. This is not simply a campaign document. It is a work that will be valuable in every library as the biography of one of the most distinguished men of this generation. Colonel Forney is known as an able writer, perhaps the best for this work that could have been selected. The book will be nicely bound and contain over 400 pages. Everybody should have a copy.

DEMOCRATIC SONG BOOK.

We have received a copy of the "Hancock and English Democratic Song Book," containing a good supply of rousing songs for the campaign. There are also sketches of our standard bearers, and a good portrait of Gen. Hancock. The songs are full of "go," and are set to familiar tunes, such as "Dixie," "Battle Cry of Freedom," "America," "Marching Through Georgia," "Bonnie Blue Flag," and a lot more. Every Democrat should have it and join in the chorus. The price is only ten cents. Address the publishers, W. R. Swan & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Customer—"Why are Malt Bitters so popular?" Druggist—"Because as a Food Medicine they enrich the blood, harden the muscles, quiet the nerves and perfect digestion." july 2-4w

Keep the Cows Clean.

To keep milk clean while in the act of drawing it, the cow must be clean, her bag and teats washed and wiped before commencing to milk her, and the milkman's hands be then washed. After straining and setting, see that no foul air can come from any quarter to taint the milk, and for this we must be particularly careful, for such is often borne on a strong breeze fully a mile off or more from the place where it originated. It is, of course, presupposed that all vessels used for holding the milk are kept clean and entirely clear of every sort of odors. We have often seen the dairy house placed close to the cattle yard, poultry house, and, what is foulest of all, a dirty pig pen. No wonder where this is the case so much butter and cheese are sent to market not fit to be eaten.

Belief in Witchcraft.

A SINGULAR INSTANCE OF SUPERSTITION.

A singular instance of belief in witchcraft, a superstition supposed to be extinct, is reported from Norristown. Some days ago a young married woman was taken ill, and her sickness was attributed by her husband to the fact that she was bewitched. Anxious to discover the guilty party, he procured a new horseshoe from a blacksmith shop, prepared it in some way to act as a charm, and threw it in to the fire. Not long afterward he heard one of his neighbors complain of a burning pain in her chest, and believed that he had found the witch. To make sure he placed some salt under the carpet at the doorway of his house, and awaited the result. Several neighbors came to see the sick woman and crossed the thresh old without difficulty, but the su-pecting one stumbled in passing over it. He intends to try further experiments, reported to be effective in discovering witches.

THE CAMPAIGN COLUMBIAN

Only 75 cents for six months, or $1,50 a year in advance. Get up clubs and send in your names.

The Hancock Campaign Banner, published at Carlisle, Pa., is a live sheet, and is working earnestly for the Democratic party. We wish it success.

GRAPES.—In gathering choice clusters use the scissors which hold the bunch after it is cut, thus avoiding the touching of the berries, which remove the bloom and injures their appearance. Those to be packed in boxes should be placed in trays and kept in a cool place for a few days, until the skin toughens, when they are to be placed with great care, using three or five pound boxes. Pack by removing the bottom of the box.

CRIMES AND CASUALITIES.

Justus Hoffman, of Pittston, murdered his wife and child on Tuesday of last week. He became frenzied at the imaginary misconduct of his twelve-year-old daughter by his first wife named Josephine, and ill-treated her. His young wife—the stepmother of the little girl—took compassion upon her and in a measure protected her from the drunken father's brutality. He left the house and returned again between six and seven o'clock. His four older children fled for safety to a room in the second story of the house and locked themselves in. The mother, with her babe upon her breast, went to a point just twenty three feet opposite the front door and sat down upon a log. He ordered her to get his supper. She replied that supper was upon the table and waiting his readiness. He demanded that she prepare supper for the children. She replied that the children's supper was also ready. He then ordered her into the house. She said: "Justus, you are in drink and angry, and you want to hurt me. You have done it before and I'm afraid of you." He then ran after her but did no catch her. He returned to the house, and the wife came back and took a seat upon the aforementioned log. He came again to the door and ordered her into the house. She said she would if he would go in and lie down for a while. "Then, says she, he turned round and went into the house, I thought he was going to bed, but in a minute I saw him at the door with a double-barreled shot gun leveled at me. I just had time to see his eye run along the barrel of the gun when he shot."

The charge completely took the scalp off the babe, several other shots entered the breast of the wife and mother and a portion of the charge went across a vacant lot and wounded a child of a Mr. Cook. The shrieks of the woman brought the neighbors out and he was apprehended by officers Strah, Hineman and Armitz and quickly lodged in the county prison at Wilkesbarre. There can be no doubt but that he has premeditated this murder for some time.

Jas. Wood, superintendent of pumps and machinery at No 10 breaker, operated by the Lehigh coal and navigation company, located a few miles east of Tamaqua, an Englishman by birth, sixty years old, married, with a family of ten children was murdered on the roadside between Bull Run and Foster's tunnel, last week, Wednesday night. When last seen alive he was in company with William Orr, a Scotch Irishman, aged about 38 years, who is given a reputation for quarreling by his neighbors. These two, together with the wife of Orr and James Churchill and his wife, had been attending the funeral of a Mrs. Bogle of Dry Hollow, at Summit Hill, on Wednesday, and after the interment indulged pretty freely in drink. On the way home all being more or less under the influence of liquor, Orr's quarrelsome disposition showed itself when he knocked his wife down from no apparent cause. She appealed to Wood to protect her, and his interference produced a reconciliation. To manifest to her husband that she bore him no ill-will for his brutal conduct she kissed him whereupon he knocked her down again and at once picked a quarrel with Wood, taking him to account for his previous interference. They sat down to talk the matter over together, while Churchill and the two women went ahead leaving them together. Thursday morning a woman going by the place where they sat found the dead body of Wood thrown across a rock with the head battered in, bruised and cut. Officer Samuel Pealer procured a warrant and proceeded to Orr's residence, arrested him and took him to Tamaqua where was lodged in the station house.

The entire gang belonging to Boyer & Peters' circus, a miserable show, was arrested last week at Greensburg for an outrageous assault upon a girl of 14 years, whom they waylaid at night after the show was out. From five to twenty of the wretches assaulted her at different times rendering her insensible for two days. A more atrocious crime was never committed in a civilized community.

The excursion steamer Garland with 1,200 persons on board, under the auspices of the Detroit moulders union, while going down the Detroit river collided with steam yacht Mamie coming up, cutting her in two so that she almost instantly sank. The latter had on board twenty-four persons, constisting mainly of Father Bleyenbergh, pastor of Trinity Roman Cathelic of that city, and a number of acolytes and boys officiating in various capacities in the service of the church. They had been on their annual excursion to Monroe and were returning home. The night was bright with moonlight, and there would seem to have been no reason, save that of criminal neglect, why the accident should have occurred. Sixteen lives were lost.

An accident occurred at the Hudson River tunnel, now in course of construction at the foot of Sixteenth street, Jersey city, last Thursday morning that resulted in the death of twenty men. This tunnel is being dug under the river to New York, for an underground railway between the two cities. As fast as the excavation is made heavy iron plates are put in to support the walls. According to the official report of the engineers of the tunnel, it was that portion of the iron roof adjoining the shaft of the connecting chambers between the two tunnels and the sinking shaft that fell in. Twenty-eight men were in the tunnel at the time, eight of whom escaped through the air lock, and twenty were killed. The engineers say that the accident occurred at the connection of the iron plates with the brick wall of the working shaft, which, during the charging of the shifts, was probably not watched as closely by the men as it should have been, and the compressed air was allowed to escape. This compressed air is relied upon to assist in supporting the roof, which was also sustained by strong timber bracing, and the escape of the air has always been prevented by stopping any leaks with the waste silk. As the roof fell, the plate closed the door of the air lock into the tunnel, and the water rising rapidly cut off the escape of the twenty men who were killed. The building of this connecting chamber, though a difficult piece of work has progressed until now. The roof was all in position and securely bolted. The connection of the iron plates with the shaft was being made at the time of the accident.

It should be the aim of every owner of Horses, Cows, &c., to make them as handsome and useful as possible. The German Horse and Cow Powder helps to develop all the powers of the animal. It improves its beauty and increases its usefulness. It makes milk, mucle and fat. By using it a horse will do more work and a cow give more milk and be in better condition with less feed. Sold only by weight at 15 cents a pound by C. A. Klein, Bloomsburg.

WYOMING SEMINARY.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS.

The Board of Visitors to Wyoming Seminary, for the year ending June 16, 1880, report as follows:

Never was an institution of learning more delightfully located. We never look from Campbell's Ledge over a valley in which cities, villages and hamlets nestle like broods of chickens; over Forty Fort,—no longer the stronghold of the resolute forty, but the last resting place of Peck and Sweland and Nelson and others, dear to the hearts of God's people; over the battle field of Wyoming; over lands level as prairie; over bright brooks and the shining Susquehanna; over hills rising like earth-billows; till we draw a long, deep breath, and are fairly lost in admiration. A friend at our side says: "I have seen the most beautiful valleys of Europe, but saw there nothing finer than this; nor in America, except the Yosemite." In this valley, celebrated in history and in poetry, dotted with huge coal breakers, grooved with lines of railroads, rich with plenty for its teeming thousands, lies the village of Kingston, and near the centre of the village,—conspicuous from afar for its architectural beauty,—is Wyoming Seminary, with ample grounds, surrounded by tasteful residences and elegant churches. The internal arrangements of the buildings are superior, presenting everything needful to the health and convenience of its inmates. Dr. Copeland, the able, experienced, and popular Principal, to whom the students are affectionately attached is a fitting successor to the beloved De Nelson. If Nelson planted this Seminary, and carried it to grow into vigorous usefulness, its influence and worth are still increasing under Dr. Copeland's able management. The courses of study are enlarged and improved till, in range of subjects and opportunity for the selection of studies, there is one nothing more to be desired. The grade of scholarship is high, and constantly rising. The cultured Lady Principal is properly regarded by the young ladies as a pattern and guide. The Commercial Department, under Prof. Sprague, enjoys a good reputation in adjoining cities for its success in qualifying young men for business. Its graduates, as a rule, can step into remunerative and responsible positions.

The committee have tried by repeated visits, and by seeking information from teachers, trustees, students, and citizens, to know thoroughly the true condition of the Seminary, and the character of its work. Several days were spent in review of the studies. The system of investigation was such as to leave no possible advantage from pre-arrangement. The visitors were allowed to ask questions, and used the liberty to our entire satisfaction; while the students, almost invariably, sustained the unexpectedly severe examination with conspicuous readiness and thoroughness. They had the ability to think, to express ideas in their own language with point and conciseness, and showed how much better it is to build mind than to cram the memory. The last recitation in Moral Philosophy was especially noteworthy, and reflected great credit upon both the Principal and the class. The record of standing was read in chapel, and heard with intense interest. Several had attained to a very superior grade of scholarship, and a large number were superior students.

Training for eternity is the best training for time; therefore we saw with thankfulness the effects of the late revival, which reached the larger part of more advanced students. We rejoice that Wyoming Seminary "writes salvation on its walls," and keeps an invigorating religious atmosphere.

The closing exercises were worthy the packed audiences of cultured people who attended them. The chapel walls were adorned with a splendid collection of drawings and paintings. The anniversary concert pleased even the best critics. The class day exercises were pervaded by a vigorous originality. The speaking of commencement day called forth high commendation, and the literary feast to which we were treated by the young ladies and gentlemen who occupied the platform was warmly praised. In the afternoon, at the close of a very able anniversary address by Rev. Thomas Guard, D. D., each member of the graduating class received a diploma. There were nine young ladies and eleven young men, making twenty in all. A diploma from Wyoming Seminary is not only a beautiful ornament: it is an honor well earned and well bestowed. The exercises were interspersed throughout with music, both instrumental and vocal. The Musical Department, under Prof. Stadler, is one of the more attractive features of the Seminary, affording advantages equal to any school of its grade in the land.

Let us encourage our young people to attend Wyoming Seminary. A sound education may kindle in their minds a mighty flame of usefulness, that shall spread over the whole world. It is our duty to bring to bear the stimulating influence of a Christian education upon our young people. It is our privilege to seek out the brightest and most promising minds, and encourage to attend our Christian schools.

HOW TO GET almost Everything.

Do you know how to get in the easiest way and to best advantage what you want for dress and house-furnishing?

First, how: Write for a catalogue; see what you can learn from it about the things you want. If samples can be useful to you, ask for them and state your wants so plainly that exactly the right samples can be sent.

Second, where: The place where goods are kept in the greatest variety; where they are sold for what they really are in respect to quality; where prices are lowest; where most care is taken to serve customers acceptably; and where you have the right to return whatever is not satisfactory.

There—no matter where you are—if you make your wants known and avail yourself of your privileges, you will get the best things in the best way, promptly and without trouble or risk; sometimes by mail, sometimes by express, almost always at less cost for carriage than the money you save in the price.

PILE REMEDY.

Piles—What unceasing tortures arise from Internal, Bleeding, External and Itching Piles. The sufferer endeavors to obtain even partial relief has discouraged the millions who suffer, and they have borne their agony in silence, thinking there was no hope or respect of a cure. Notwithstanding the total failure of the many remedies heretofore offered for the cure of piles, and the picture of agony resting on the face of those who have tried the various remedies but in vain, we eagerly sought for and announce that we have at last found a remedy that will relieve the most distressing case. Read what the sufferer says after using the remedy: Dr. Henry Myers, Lancaster, Pa., says: "I have been afflicted with Piles for 30 years, and have used many remedies, but never found any permanent relief until I used Dr. Henry's Pile Remedy. I am now entirely free from the disease." Dr. Henry's Pile Remedy is prepared by Dr. Henry Myers, Lancaster, Pa., and is sold by druggists at $1 per package. Try Dr. Briggs' Hunion Balsam.

$1,000 REWARD

CATARRH is the most universal and distressing disease of the present day, and the scores of worthless remedies offered for the cure of this disgusting disease, which are worse than worthless, have discouraged the millions who suffer and have tried in vain for relief and cure until their courage is gone and they victims of despair and doubt. Now we are with Dr. Josiah Briggs' Catarrh Specifics Nos 1 and 2, and how shall we proceed to convince that we are honest? By refunding the money in every case we will furnish them to responsible parties on condition—"No cure no pay." 2nd—We will pay $500 for any case they will not cure. 3rd—Will pay $500 for their equal as a cure. 4th—Will pay $500 if any thing poisonous or deleterious is found in their composition. $1,000 will be paid if in any respect Dr. Briggs' Catarrh Specifics are found different from representation. Here is an opportunity for those discouraged by repeated failures to try again on a guaranteed cure. And the timid who fear deception may venture to try these specifics without fearing that they are to be humbugged, as there is no risk to run. They are the cheapest, best and most agreeable. If not found satisfactory demand your money and it will be returned. Sold by C. A. Klein, Bloomsburg Pa.

BUNION BALSAM.

Bunions, Corns and other ailments of the feet cause much suffering among all nations by whom shoes are worn. There is more than $100,000 worth of boots and shoes destroyed annually in the United States on the feet of the wearers more than is necessary by cutting while new, or nearly so, to make room for painful bunions, corns, ingrowing nails, sore instep, etc. Besides this great sacrifice, there is paid in New York to doctors for treating the pedalry in New England states about $50,000; in the western and southern about $50,000; and in the rest of the world about $200,000; besides this there is $50,000 spent annually for caustics and other worthless compounds for the cure of Bunions, Corns, sore Instens, tender feet, etc. To avoid these great losses and expenditures, use Dr. Josiah Briggs' Bunion Balsam and Sure Corn Cure, which is the only preparation known that gives immediate relief and radically cures hard, soft and ulcerated Bunions hard, soft and festering corns, vascular excrescence, callosities large and small, sore instep' blistered heels, tender feet, ingrowing nails, etc., without causing or leaving any path or scars. Sold by druggists safe and sure. Sold by C. A. Klein, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Two bottles in one box, one of which reduced with water makes 64 ounces for use. Price $1.50 per package; furnished on responsible parties

Hancock Under Fire.

A STORY OF HIS DASH THROUGH THE WILDERNESS HITHERTO UNRELATED.

We don't remember to have seen anything in reference to General Hancock's dash through the wilderness and on the line of the Po river, without it be a mere reference to the series of engagements had with the rebels during the first days of the Grant advance on Richmond.

That General Hancock had been offered the command of the entire army of the Potomac was generally credited ere the army had moved out of its winter quarters and started on the road to Richmond under General Grant and General Meade. But the experiences of Generals McClellan, Hooker, Pope and Burnside with the Government had caused a settled conviction in the army that the success of any movement upon General Lee depended in a large measure upon the support the Government was disposed to grant the general in command and while the Government was censured by the rank and file of the army for its "shortcomings" in support of the several commanders, no doubt exists that General Hancock seeing the way in which his associate commanders had one by one dropped out of place under the persuasive powers of the Government, felt no desire to take up the sceptre of command and run the gauntlet of a political fire in the rear. He was content with the simple command of the best corps in the army. His decision was a wise one as the sequel shows. To be commander then was but a sinecure. To command a corps the way was open to do a service to the country alike of profit to the cause for which the army was contending and the men whom he had the honor of leading into the thickest of the fight.

It was well understood in the commencement of the memorable campaign of "On to Richmond" that General Grant's reliance of individual support and co-operation, as well as in advisory capacity, was in General Hancock. The confidence of the army was in Hancock. He was equally as popular with the army as was McClellan in his palmiest days. Grant saw in Hancock the make-up of a thorough soldier and disciplinarian, whose banner had never trailed in the dust or been shadowed by defeat. He was the man to lead, the one of all others in whom the chief commander placed his reliance for the successful encounter which must pave the way to a final victory. Some one must bear the brunt of the battle and Hancock was chosen, so to speak, as the right-hand man to Grant.

At the dawn of day, May 12, 1864, sheltered by the dim twilight and a dense mist, the Hancock corps moved quietly and cautiously up from its position on the south side of the Po to the north side and toward the enemy's lines. Imagine a bluff covered from base to top with rifle pits and breastworks, with half a dozen tiers of cannon—eighteen and thirty-two pounders—stretching along over the rugged and woody space, and you have a fair idea of the position of the two rebel divisions when attacked by the Hancock corps.

The troops gallantly surmounted all the difficulties in reaching the base of the hill, the excitement increasing, till it broke out in a splendid rush at the rebel entrenchments which the troops leaped with loud cheers, dashing into the enemy's camp and compelling their surrender en masse. Three thousand men, forty guns and two major-generals with several stands of colors was the trophy of the first dash on the rifle pits. The charge of the Second Corps was followed by heavy cannonading all along the line, and under the cover of which the whole line moved up to the support of Hancock's corps, and immediately an inceseant rattle and roar of battle arose along the whole line. Often rival bayonets interlocked and a a fierce and death-like grapple over the intrenchments lasted for several hours, the rebel flags now surging up side by side with those of the Union, and anon torn and riddled disappearing in the woods.

It was here that Hancock exhibited the true ideal of the general. Finding his men likely to waver they being considerbly outnumbered, he rode up close to the lines and in a loud voice called his men to "stand firm!" and as if necessary to encourage them at this critical moment, he drew his sword and led the column forward until they had scaled the pits. Then the air was rent with the cheers and huzzas from the victorious band. The losses had been fearful, yet the Second Corps held its position, though repeatedly attacked. They were there to stay the grand old guard of the army. It completed the first act in the campaign on Lee's army, and closed the eighth day of almost continuous fighting. The Union forces suffered 29,350 hors-decombat, and the rebel loss succeeded 30,000 forty cannon, twenty-two stands of colors and 8,000 men taken prisoners.

It is thus we speak of a sigle engagement and of the commander of the Second Corps, who in all the battles of the campaign was conspicicus among the many brave officers of the army, for daring, enthusiasm and steady valor.

Will he not make equally as steady an executive of the nation and govern, as he was wont to do, the men who love and adore him as the ruler in firmness, yet with simplicity, given to moderation and kindness.

One of the most urgent demands of our time is a system of education which shall train the young to apply their school learning. At the Pennsylvania State College practical instruction in Agriculture, Horticulture, Botany, Zoology, Mechanics, Chemistry, etc. is given, and thus theory in the class room is applied and enforced by experience in the field and labratory. Fall session opens Aug. 27th. For catalogue and full information address the Business Manager, State College, Centre Co., Pa.

A movement is being made by Philadelphia physicians to secure a new law as to experts' testimony in criminal cases. The bill which they have drafted provides that, when expert medical testimony is desired, the counsel on each side shall select the name of six or more physicians in regular standing, and from the entire number the Judge shall draw two by lot. These two shall testify to any points presented to them. Either side may also introduce expert testimony on their own account, but the idea is that the opinions of the two presumably unbiassed men will have the greatest weight with the jury.

"NO CURE, NO PAY."—We authorize our Agents to guarantee that our medicine, if taken according to directions, will relieve constipation and the diseases incident to a torpid liver; and if any one will show by positive proof that it has not produced what we guarantee, they are entitled to a return of their money provided they take the genuine Simmon's Liver Regulator according to directions.

Indignation among the passengers in a railroad car is reported from Ohio because a lady left her pug dog drink out of a tin cup attached to the water cooler. She replied to a remonstrance by asserting that her dogs lips were cleaner than those of the tobacco-chewing man who objected. He retorted that he could whip any man who would become her champion, but nobody volunteered.

The Brooklyn Bridge.

The tearing down of buildings in Chatham Street to make way for the approach of the East River bridge, is being actively pushed. In the last few months a rapid advance has been made upon the approaches on both sides of the river, notwithstanding a considerable delay caused by the difficulty in obtaining possession of the land and buildings along the line of work. Arches have been erected on several streets, and about 400 men are at work upon the approach between Rose and Chatham streets. In Brooklyn the approaches to the bridge are nearly done, some 200 men being employed on that side. In Chatham street the approach to the bridge will be on a level with the street, and a trifle over 100 feet wide. It will be nearly opposite the Court House. The stone railing four feet in height, which is to extend on each edge of the bridge its entire length, will end on the "house line" in the street, and will be marked by ornamental stone posts, on which there will be lamps. The approach lending from the street will be divided as follows: In the centre a promenade for foot passsengers. This will be seventeen feet in width and raised about three feet from the roadway of the bridge. Next to this and on each side is a space for a rapid transit or street car double track railway These spaces will be separated from the promenade by an iron railing. Besides these there will be two wagon roadways for all kinds of vehicles, on each side of the bridge, limited by the stone railing on the edge. This will be paved with granite blocks; the promenade will be of asphalt concrete. If it is thought necessary to charge toll buildings for the purpose will be erected at the entrance close to the street. But this matter has not yet been arranged, though the present expectations are that for a time, at least, toll will be charged. It is probable that the bridge at night will be illuminated with the electric light.

No More Hard Times.

If you will stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style, buy good healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of employing expensive, quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medecine that does you only harm, but put your trust in that simple, pure remedy, Hop Bitters; that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see good times and have good health.—Chronicle.

Covington is a doomed city. It is situated on the Bend of the Missouri River, the banks of which are eaten away. The ground on which the Court House stood a year ago is now covered by many feet of water. The cutting away is done unevenly. On a recent Sunday the current set in shore and took off a strip of land thirty feet wide in a few hours. No invasions were made for another week, when another slice was cut off. Then half a dozen houses were moved back thirty feet, and the next day the land on which they had stood were all gone. The residents have tried to moor trees and logs to the bank in the hope of forming a barrier for the flood but the current is so swift and the water so deep that these attempts have failed.

The ladies who some time since were unable to go out, having taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound are quite recovered, and have gone on their way rejoicing.

The Columbus fact tells how on Driesbachs menagerie entering Newark, O., the elephant's keeper fell in a fit, when the elephant wouldn't let any one to approach him, but at first taking him up tenderly with his trunk tried to put him on his tusks, but finding he was insensible put him gently down again and showed great distress. At length the man revived enough to speak to the animal, and to tell him to let the people approach.

What! what! well I declare Smith, you out again? I thought the Doctor said you were dying with the kidney trouble. Smith—So he did but you see I am wearing a Day's Kidney Pad.

Andreas Eichenberg went into the Capital City Bank, at Columbus Ohio, and asked President Richly for a loan of $108. Richly declined, and Eichenberg instantly shot him, after which he killed himself. There seems to have been no other incentive than a sudden and furious rage of disappointment.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM.
OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
The Positive Cure
For all Female Complaints.

This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when its use is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.

It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.

In fact it has proved to be the greatest and best remedy that has ever been discovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.

It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

THE GREAT MEXICAN REMEDY.

Thousands suffering from Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Scrofula and kindred diseases will hail with delight this new and wonderful discovery, which as a disease conqueror and health restorer, has no equal in modern medicine. The great Mexican Remedy was first introduced into California in 1859, where in a few months it effected so many wonderful cures as to create a demand for the same to be introduced East. It is the only medicine in the world compounded from the native plants, roots and herbs of Mexico. It cures all blimers, from the worst Scrofula, to a common blotch, pimple, or eruption, while it clears and beautifies the complexion. In diseases of the Stomach, Blood, Liver and Kidneys it has permanently cured thousands of hopeless cases where all other known remedies had failed. One dose will cure any case of Sick Headache. Two doses will break up any ordinary cough or cold. Persons suffering with Heartburn, Waterbrash, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Costiveness, Piles, Palpitation of the Heart, Low Spirits, and kindred affections, will find the Mexican remedy a swift and sure relief. The genuine is placed before the public, under the following name:

Herbaline Bitters the Great Mexican Remedy.

Call on your druggist and get a bottle of the Mexican Remedy and convince yourself that it is the Best Medicine in the World.
